Portfolio performance

The Bendigo Income Generation Fund has generated an average annual return of 2.36%pa since inception. The Fund paid a distribution of 0.713% cents per unit equating to 2.85% p.a. Over the past quarter the Fund achieved a negative return of 0.33% as capital was eroded by market movements.

The second quarter of 2022 saw the global growth narrative continue to soften on inflation pressures, the war in Ukraine, European energy crisis and central banks withdrawing accommodative monetary policy. This led to sustained weakness in equity and bond markets with the US equity market experiencing its worst return for the first half in 60 years as a circa 20% decline put the market into bear territory. Other global markets also saw heavy losses on a growing lack of confidence amongst investors.

Inflationary pressures have been a main driver of the negative performance in markets. Consumer price index readings across the globe have registered much higher than anticipated and central banks have struggled to combat the increase in prices. The US Federal Reserve (Fed) became more aggressive in their rate hikes and reset expectations of how high rates could go. The pace and extent of rate hikes built fears of a recession late in the quarter spurring further volatility across markets. Traditional equity/bond portfolios have been pressured from all fronts causing unprecedented market moves. Bond funds have traditionally been a safe haven from equity volatility but the increasing interest rates from returns of so close to zero mean that capital losses cannot be absorbed by income returns. The dynamics of the geopolitical and global economy post-covid are increasingly difficult to assess and the outlook remains highly uncertain.

In Australia, the ASX200 fell 11.9% over the quarter, breaking the trend of outperforming global peers in the first quarter of 2022. Banks were an underperformer and the fears of recession saw their share prices fall significantly. The Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) followed other global central banks with faster than expected rate hikes. The RBA raised rates by 0.25% in May and 0.50% in June to a cash rate of 0.85%. House prices softened into the end of the quarter, notably in Sydney and Melbourne. There are growing expectations for prolonged weakness through to 2023 on further rate hikes and affordability concerns. Other economic data points such as employment and GDP have remained robust so far. Nevertheless, sentiment is softening with consumers and businesses feeling the impacts of cost pressures and rate hikes.

The Australian credit market had a turbulent quarter with credit spreads widening. Senior unsecured bank securities found some support and outperformed tier 2 subordinated, hybrid and corporate bonds. The securitised market was mixed with the primary market functioning positively but a lack of interest in the secondary market causing unfavourable price moves.

The Fund is positioned conservatively and well poised to take advantage of opportunities as the market stabilises. Fund exposure to cash and money market securities remains elevated and has increased the liquidity position of the Fund. This will allow for reinvestment into higher returning assets when the market returns to more normal conditions. Exposures to hybrid and tier 2 subordinated bonds has reduced as further volatility is expected in the near term. The Fund is primarily invested in high quality assets, maintaining an average credit rating of A over the quarter. At the end of June, the portfolio the portfolio has 5.3% allocated in cash instruments, 32.0% in corporate bonds, 55.2% in securitised assets and 7.5% in hybrids. The Fund's income will increase in line with cash rate increases over the coming months.
