Market Commentary

The Reserve Bank of Australia lowered rates twice during March, reducing the official cash rate to 0.25%, the lowest in Australian history. The second rate cut was following the COVID-19 outbreak which has caused Australia and many countries to shut their borders and place restrictions on businesses and individuals to slow the spread of the disease. This is causing significant disruption to economies around the world. Whilst the Fund rate held steady during the quarter, downward pressure on rates is widely expected to continue.
