Portfolio performance

For the month of December 2021, the Strategic Income Fund achieved a -0.02% return for the Class B units. The return was impacted by capital volatility across credit markets over the month. The Class B units has generated a return over the past year of 0.93% after fees and since inception delivered an average return of 3.17%.

A global surge in Omicron cases throughout December and a more hawkish tone from the US Federal Reserve threatened the possibility of a weaker end to the year for global share markets. Inflation remained a headwind, with annualised CPI posting the highest print since 1982 (0.6pp m/m to 6.8%) and the Federal Reserve announced that it would no longer refer to it as “transitory” as it was no longer deemed an accurate term for describing the current high inflation rate. Despite these developments causing unease amongst investors, equity markets finished the year strongly as governments were reluctant to impose the severe lockdown restrictions seen in prior waves due to concerns that it would derail the economic recovery. Although the hawkish tone intensified from the Federal Reserve, markets rallied following the meeting as positioning prior was seen as too defensive. The S&P 500 posted its third-best month of 2021 (rose 4.36%) while domestically the ASX 200 increased by 2.9%.

The rapid rise of COVID-19 cases and persistent global inflationary pressures led to increased volatility in the Australian bond market. This volatility was further fuelled by the RBA’s asset purchase program which has tightened liquidity. Signs of stress were evident as the spread between bond yields and swap rates were the highest in six years. The RBA kept the cash rate at its all-time low of 0.1% and noted that it would wait until February to review its bond buying program. A faster Federal Reserve taper would provide the RBA with the ability to taper without triggering unwanted appreciation in the exchange rate. The government bond yield curve has risen over the past month through expectations that the RBA will continue to tighten their policy positions and credit market spreads also finished the month wider.

A focus on high quality investment remains and at the end of December, approximately 21.6% of the portfolio is allocated to cash instruments, 44.3% in bank/corporate Floating Rate Notes and 34.1% to asset-backed securities. There are currently no unrated assets in the Fund and approximately 55% of non-cash assets are rated AA- or higher.
